HOLOCOM® ANNOUNCES STAFF PROMOTIONS

(SAN DIEGO – April 9, 2012) Holocom, the leader in protective distribution systems (PDS) for SIPRNet and other classified networks, announced the promotion of two key staff positions. Jay Anaya, former Holocom Program Manager, has been promoted to Vice President, Services & Training. Scott R. Beeson, Vice President, has been promoted to Senior Vice President & Chief Operating Officer.

Mr. Anaya has been an integral component of Holocom's success for more than seven years. He has led the effort in developing the certification training programs for Holocom PDS design, installation, and QA, and he has personally trained hundreds of installers across the continental US, EU, SWA and Pacific Rim. In announcing the promotion, John Burns, Holocom CEO, said "Jay has been instrumental in forging successful partnerships with defense and industry leaders as well as overseeing the successful installation and accreditation of hundreds of Holocom PDS projects supporting thousands of SIPRNet end user connections."

Mr. Beeson has been Vice President of Holocom since January 2010. A former US Marine Corps captain, Beeson is a mechanical engineer with specialized training in management and organizational behavior, and currently manages production, inventory, logistics, and product design and engineering. Burns said, "The Board and I unequivocally endorse Scott to lead Holocom's day-to-day operations. He is extraordinarily attentive to detail and has the respect and admiration of employees and customers alike."

Burns added, "Scott and Jay together embrace the critical core principles essential to the success of a small, streamlined organization. They have abundant energy and enthusiasm and a selfless eye to customer satisfaction. We look forward to their leading our group in continued success for years to come."
